

Faculty Sabbaticals/Leave

Below please find the list of MIT Sloan faculty scheduled to go on sabbatical/leave in the next academic cycle. MIT Sloan makes every effort to keep popular courses active when their customary instructors are on sabbatical.

What is a sabbatical? A sabbatical is a period of leave given to a faculty member, typically once every seven years. Sabbaticals allow faculty to focus on their area of research through new studies, collaboration with peers, and development and publication of articles and books. Sometimes faculty are also tapped to serve for a set period of time as an advisor to a government body. Sabbaticals and public service deepen the expertise and experience of the faculty and upon return enrich the classroom and the institution with new ideas.
